

The herd is inching closer to the forest, where the cubs are hiding.

They'll have ringside seats to observe the action.

The fading light can only be to the lions' advantage.

Buffalo are dangerous.

The trick is to single out the right quarry.

A straggler.

The lions carefully slip into position.

In a pincer maneuver, they sneak up on both sides.

A buffalo hunt is a family affair.

Patch calls the little ones in.

They need to learn what it takes to kill a beast like this.

Lionesses are supreme strategists but Arthur's extra muscle brings the buffalo down.

This is the cubs' heritage.

Arthur and Patch reinforce family bonds through this age old hunting ritual, passing it on to the next generation.
